Join Voices in the Wilderness...

Since 1996, Voices in the Wilderness has worked to end the U.S.-led economic sanctions against the people of Iraq. Over seven years, more than 65 delegations, made up of teachers, veterans, social workers, artists, health care professionals, trades people and people of faith, have traveled to Iraq. Many of these delegates carried symbolic amounts of medicine as an act of civil disobedience against the injustice of the economic sanctions; they then returned to the United States to tell about the brutalizing effects of the sanctions, magnified by the US bombing of the Iraqi civilian infrastructure during the Gulf War.

Recently Voices received a summons for a civil suit from the Office of Foreign Assets Control for fines in excess of $20,000. Voices will not pay this fine, instead, we plan on providing more humanitarian aid to Iraqi civilians and educating the world community about the deadly effects of the US bombing and occupation of Iraq. The Justice Department is choosing to spend its resources to launch an attack on Voices in the Wilderness at a time when Iraqi people and US soldiers are being killed daily and the US occupying forces have failed to provide for the security and basic humanitarian needs of Iraqi people.

We pledge to continue an ongoing presence in Iraq. Look for diaries of delegates in Iraq as they witness firsthand the aftermath of this latest war and the present reality of occupation.
